Independent Living

Apartment-style living for independent seniors

At some point in a person’s retirement, the upkeep and responsibilities that go with owning a home look less desirable, while living in a home-style retirement community, free from those cares and surrounded by peers, has real appeal. That’s where Vernon Birches comes in.

Vernon Birches enables seniors, 62-plus or handicapped, to live independently and affordably in our modern, comfortable one- and two-bedroom apartments sheltered by tall white birches on the banks of the Connecticut River in Vernon, Vermont. Relaxing and private, Vernon Birches provides residents with an environment that includes like-minded fellow residents, nearby services and amenities, and the many charms and attractions of scenic southern Vermont.

A community of caring you can call home.
What is living at Vernon Birches like?
For starters, it includes the comfort and convenience of an apartment with a full kitchen, dining/living room, laundry, bath and ample closet space — all on one level (optional telephone and cable TV service are available). Vernon Birches is for seniors who want an independent lifestyle in a community of peers. For this reason, our residents invariably find that they and their neighbors have much in common. Residents live in a secure campus community located in a peaceful small-town setting amid southern Vermont’s abundant recreational possibilities. They have no maintenance worries, since all grounds and home maintenance is included. And, about seven miles away, Brattleboro offers the activities and services of a mid-size city such as banking, food shopping, dining, movie theaters and medical services.

For these reasons and more, Vernon Birches is a place people love to call home.
